

"My Credit Union Story"

I was a civilian member of the police department for 35 years, a member of the credit union for 66 years. In 1942 I started in the records section in the basement of city hall. It also had the Detective Bureau, I.D. Section, Chief's Office, and Property Room with Irv Specht. He introduced me to the Credit Union and I have had my share of loans. There was a lady; I think that her name was Betty Eggerding, who helped Irv. She was in the office shared by Harry Rightmire who was the detective bureau's secretary.

Soon, Irv had me volunteering for positions in the credit union. As a credit officer, Irv would bring an application down the hall and say it was good. I don't ever remember refusing one. I would sign it and the applicant could get the check right away. I worked with figuring out the dividends, and with Captain Dana Mills and officers in keeping it a good credit union.

At that point in time, I never dreamed of it getting as big as it is now.

Thanks!
